From the President

To all shipmates;

This past week end, May 13 to 15 2011, was our reunion in Mobile, Al. I want to thank those who were able to attend for making this another memorable get together. Per usual the activities were well planned so they went off without a hitch. For this we need to thank Dave, and of course Carol, for doing such a great job again.

The membership is just like an extended family. We may not always agree with everyone else but when help is needed it is given.

Thanks to all,
Kirk Anderson

ps. The turnout this year was very good, not the best but still very good. Hopefully the next reunion in Charleston will be as good or even better.

Sampson Reunions

We had a very successful reunion in Mobile. Dave Brandt and his helpers arranged for a great hotel, good side trips to the USS Alabama and NAS Pensacola and an enjoyable Saturday night dinner. See 2011 Reunion Pictures

Our next reunion in 2013 will be held in Charleston, SC. The reunion will probably be held in the spring and details will be available when it gets closer to the reunion.

Girl Scout Cookies for DDG-102

At the reunion meeting Bob Andepsch told us how several Girl Scout troops in Ocean County, NJ had sent cookies to the new USS Sampson.

Many people buy cookies to support the Girl Scouts but do not really want or need them for themselves. The Girl Scouts have set it up so that you can donate the cookies when you order them.

Donations usually go to a food bank or other charity but the Ocean County Girl Scout troops arranged to send their "donated" cookies to the USS Sampson with help from Bob.

Although the cookies were donated, the Girl Scouts had to pay the shipping costs to get the cookies to the Sampson. At our reunion meeting we voted to reimburse the Girl Scouts for the cost of shipping the donated cookies to the Sampson.

If you are interested in setting up something like this, feel free to contact Bob for details at: nottodaybob@comcast.net.

Bob has been in contact with the public affairs officer on the Sampson.

** Important Reminders **

- Check out the USS Sampson website often: <http://www.sampsonddg10.org>
Check out the Guestbook link at the bottom of the USS Sampson website. Look for old Sampson shipmates that you know, but are not already members. Contact them and tell them about our association and our reunions.
- Notify Dave Brandt if you change your email address and to keep your dues up to date or if you would like him to email you a copy of the USS Sampson Roster. drbrandt@ftc-i.net
- If you get a message from a shipmate, please respond especially if a response is requested.
- Do not forget the effort going on to save the USS Adams as a museum ship in Jacksonville, Florida. Join the effort.
For the latest news check the following websites for the current information on the Adams Class Museum at:
www.adamsclassmuseum.org
and
www.adamsclassddgvets.org
- Dave Brandt is trying to put together a document that includes pictures, taken at previous reunions, of shipmates in groups or with their wives.
If you have any pictures, especially from the earlier reunions, please send them to Dave for the archives.

If you have the ability of scanning them, you can send the files to: drbrandt@ftc-i.net
- Sampson Cruise Books are available on CDs in the Ship's Store. (see Sampson \(DDG-10\) Ship's Store).
The cruise books/years available are:
1966, 67, 69-70, 72-75, 77-78, 79, 85, 86-87, 88 and 90-91.

Sea Stories

From Kirk Anderson

This is one of my more memorable happenings while serving aboard the Sampson.

I was one of the few aboard with a military drivers license. One night while in San Juan a fellow FT. I believe his last name was Ace, got word his grandmother, I believe, was near death. He applied and got an emergency leave so he could be with her before the end. Arrangements were made for him to fly out of Roosevelt Roads Navy Base but this required transportation. I sort of volunteered to drive him so I picked up a vehicle from the base where we were tied up. We got directions and started off towards Rosie Roads. Just before we got to Arecibo the vehicle developed a flat tire, of course it did. Well as no luck would have it there was no spare. I didn't check and apparently neither did the motor pool, stupid us.

I had pulled off the main road into a deserted service station, I believe that it what it was. Nothing but the building and of course no phone. Ace and I hitch-hiked to the next town, Arecibo. Neither of us spoke Spanish so we had fun, not really, finding a phone and calling for help. I talked to someone back at the base and told him what had happened. I was told to stay where I was and help would be there shortly, I actually believed what I was told. Ace decided to proceed without me so he would not miss the planned flight home. I spent the next four hours standing on a street corner waiting for help. I had next to no money but I did have a flash light which I put in the small of my back. During my stay there were about 6 guys who came up to me and asked if what I had was a gun, I showed them what I had and was still alive when help finally arrived. We drove to where the disabled vehicle was and changed the tire. I then followed them back to the base. The Chief on duty told me I shouldn't have left the vehicle because it could have been stripped, not a good thing. I told him I had no choice but to leave it so I could call for help and that I was told to stay where I was. He may not have been completely happy but nothing more happened because of the incident, at least not to me anyway.

To the best of my knowledge Ace made it home in time but never back to the ship. I learned that Puerto Rico had a bad rep for unfriendly people and a lot of violence but I didn't experience either. I did learn to never volunteer again and that lesson appears to have remained even after all of these years.

Compared to other Sea Stories this one is rather pale but to me I will never forget, I hope never, what happened that night in Puerto Rico.

From Ted Unser

In 1966 the Sampson, while operating in the Caribbean pulled into Guantanamo Bay, Cuba (GITMO).

My brother Bill had joined the Navy after I had and he was now an aviation machinist mate assigned to the F8 squadron over on Leeward Point in GITMO. My brother had liberty for the weekend meaning that he had no duties and did not have muster. He met me at the pier when the Sampson arrived and after I showed him around the ship, he showed me around the base. That evening we "visited" the enlisted men's club and rode the "cattle-cars" back to the ship.

The Sampson was no longer tied up and was now anchored out. My brother had planned to stay onboard that evening so we took the whaleboat out to the Sampson. He signed in on the quarterdeck we settled in to the ET berthing compartment where we had an empty bunk.

(Ted & Bill Unser in GITMO)

Early Sunday the next morning I awoke to "Set the sea and anchor detail". I woke my brother and then ran up on deck to see that the whaleboat was now out of the water and secured. The ship was pulling out for an emergency search. A Venezuelan airliner was missing.

Bill reported to the executive officer who after some questioning told my brother that they would notify his squadron and he may as well enjoy the ride. Since it was Sunday, we did not have much to do and hung around the signal bridge – until my brother got seasick from the gentle swells we were steaming through. He remained in the rack until, luckily, the search was called off and we pulled back into GITMO that evening (instead of remaining at sea and continuing operations).

My brother was very happy to get back ashore. In fairness to him, he had not been on a ship and he did do much better later in his career when he was an E2A plane captain assigned to VAW 124 aboard the USS Independence, CVA-62.

From Jack Suarez

Long ago on a summer night in 1962, (must have been summer as we were in whites), a usual night out in Boston was in the making or should I say an unusual time was beckoning. After drinking underage for many hours, A & B returned to their Locker Club above the notorious Palace on Washington Street in the Combat Zone. This particular locker club was most convenient, as mentioned the Palace was downstairs, the Golden Nugget around the corner and Jerome's a few doors down. Down the block was a C & W Honky Tonk that I think was called the Novelty. Anyway, after an evening of imbibing, A & B returned to the locker club to change back into uniform, and came upon a shipmate we'll call C, getting the hell beat out of him in the head of the club. A & B intervened and physically persuaded the unknown assailant to cease pummeling C. C was only about 5'2", but 5' of that was mouth as that's why he probably ended up in the present condition. All the way back to the ship, C kept ranting how he had things under control and didn't need A & B to butt in. A & B felt his attitude amounted to being quite ungrateful and they let C know it in no uncertain terms about their feelings. After returning to the quarterdeck of the Sampson, the trio headed up the starboard side with intentions of going to the mess deck. The argument started really heating up and C kicked B in the groin. At that, A suggested that he and B should throw C, the ungrateful little b---strd over the side. A & B picked up C and proceeded to dangle the SOB over the side, when all of a sudden C was flying through the air. The eyes on A & B were as big as watermelons as both couldn't believe what they were seeing? Apparently A let go and figured B would hold on and B must have had the same idea.

All that was visible was a little sailor hat floating in Boston Harbor. Oh what seemed like an eternity passed before C broke the surface. Holy s---t was exclaimed because if God forbid he didn't surface, it was life in Portsmouth for something gone wrong. C started yelling like crazy and A & B were trying to shut him up. The PO3 on watch came running up and saw what was happening and said "you crazy S.O.B's, I'm getting out of here" Luckily the O D wasn't around, maybe left for wardroom coffee or the head because he never showed. A & B told C if he shut up they would pull him up with one of those rope fenders that were hanging over the side. He agreed and dogpaddled over and was pulled up. His whites (if you could call them that) were mostly black and he was crying, screaming, nose running and promising A & B that they would pay. Now that C was safe on board, A & B got to take a real good look at him and A & B were rolling around the deck laughing and shaking so hard that peeing in their pants couldn't have been far off. The trio then headed for the mess decks. Each time C took a step, streams of dirty water squirted into the air. The laughter started again and one thing for sure, both A & B were glad it was around 03:30 and everyone onboard was sleeping.

Since B & C bunked aft, A missed out on what happened when they went down to their compartment. The next morning A was told that on top of the s---t can rolled up was the worst set of whites you could ever imagine. C swore he would never talk to A & B again and he sure wasn't about to admit to anyone what happened to him as he would never hear the end of it. The PO on watch couldn't mention it either as then he might be implicated for dereliction of duty. A, B, & C were eventually discharged. C got out first and A & B were left and since then have laughed uncontrollably about it over the years. Guess A & B were also thanking their lucky stars that this didn't turn into something bad. But then again, aren't sailors supposed to know how to swim?

This tale is for you to believe or disbelieve. Only A & B could confirm this as C probably to this day isn't talking! The names of A, B & C have been omitted as partial ignorance of Maritime Law and the statute of limitations. Perhaps if you could figure out who A & B were, maybe with some prodding you never know.

Editor's Note:

This section was added at the suggestion of several shipmates. As editor, I am looking for humorous or interesting stories that you have from your time aboard the Sampson and would like to share.

It would be helpful if you can keep your stories to no more than one column or half a page.

I prefer to post your input just as I receive it and I will try not to alter your story - but - I reserve the right to edit language and content.

(Ship) Yard Sale

My brother is downsizing and gave me two copies of the 1965 "Keel". The "Keel" was similar to our ship cruise books and it covered each company as they passed through the USN Training Center at Great Lakes.

The book contains 84 pages of pictures and general information about recruit training plus 16 pages of pictures specific to Company 93, my brother's company.

If you went through Great Lakes in 1965, or even better if you happened to be in Company 93, let me know and the book is yours for the cost of postage.
